READING PASSAGE 1

You should spend about 20 minutes on Questions 1–13, which are based on Reading Passage 1 below.

An early cultural tourist

In the 15th century, the Italian merchant Cyriacus of Ancona journeyed in search of the Mediterranean's classical past. In doing so, he laid the groundwork for today's cultural holidays

Today we take it for granted that we travel around the world to admire the monuments of the past. We prepare for such trips by reading about what we are going to see, set out on the journey with a good idea of how we will get there and where we will stay, and have a sense of what we will encounter on location. Cyriacus of Ancona (1391-1452), the first cultural tourist since antiquity, lacked these advantages when, in the first half of the 15th century, he sailed around the Mediterranean in search of the remains of Greek and Roman civilisations.

Cyriacus first became fascinated by ancient monuments while walking in his home city Ancona and looking at the marble arch, erected in AD 115, to the Roman Emperor Trajan. He suddenly saw the culture in a new light. He no longer saw it as just a familiar and generally overlooked landmark, but as a doorway to the wonders of ancient imperial Rome. Not many people of Cyriacus's time were interested in historical travel; they generally ignored old buildings and structures, or worse, dismantled them for their building materials.

Cyriacus decided to see the world for himself and to record details of whatever other antiquities remained to be discovered. His training as a merchant did not prepare him for this vocation; he did not know ancient languages, history or art. However, he set out to solve these failings, first by learning Latin at the age of 30 and then adding ancient Greek. Having done this, he then set off on voyages around the Mediterranean to find, investigate and understand ancient cultures from their buildings, sculptures and inscriptions. Thus he became the first archaeologist and cultural tourist, predating other antiquarians by some 200 years.

Travel in the 15th century, however, was anything but simple or enjoyable. Overland journeys by foot or mule along bad roads, under constant threat from bandits, were bad; voyages by sea were even worse. When the weather cooperated, sailing went relatively smoothly: ships proceeded along coasts from one recognisable landmark to another. However, when there was no wind, the ship did not move. Strong winds were no friends either; they drenched the ship with lashing waves and blew it off course. Water swamped the deck, splashed into the cabins and soaked mattresses, clothes and food. Remarkably, Cyriacus never complained about the miseries of travel. Optimistic by nature, he endured such hardships unafraid and saw opportunities where other people saw setbacks.

Among many of the important records made by Cyriacus was his crucial documenting, in 1431, of the remains of Cyzicus, an ancient Roman city that had relied on commerce for its financial success. He hired a local person to take him to the site and then had to work out for himself the significance of the ruins he was looking at because there was no guidebook on ancient architecture to help him.

Indeed, he had no contemporary knowledge about the ruins. Cyzicus had been a splendid city in its prime. Unfortunately, the area was highly seismic and in AD 123 the city was so devastated by a major earthquake that, when the Roman Emperor Hadrian visited it the following year, he was so saddened that he decided to subsidise a campaign to reconstruct Cyzicus. He made a substantial donation for a new temple to the Roman god Jupiter. Cyriacus thought the ruined city was awe-inspiring. He found the remains of the temple and examined it in great detail, looking for clues in ancient texts to help him understand what he was seeing. He sketched the great doorway adorned with carved foliage and mythological characters. Cyriacus's account of this temple is the only record of this building, as in the following centuries it was entirely stripped of all its stonework and all that remains is its base.

Cyriacus also visited mainland Greece, in 1436, when no one went to Greece in order to see the country's ancient ruins. One of his destinations was the sanctuary of Delphi. The ancient Greeks considered Delphi as being situated in the most beautiful spot in Greece. When Cyriacus arrived at the site of Delphi, however, he found war, earthquakes and avalanches had all but obliterated its ruins. Determined to find any ancient traces, Cyriacus spent six days walking all over the area, peering at odd stone blocks sticking out of the ground, running his hands over inscriptions to trace fragments of words, and trying to puzzle out the few surviving structural remains. Climbing uphill towards the rocks that tower over the site, he came upon a theatre built into the slope. Soon after his visit, the site was buried by a rockslide and was not seen again until archaeologists began to excavate the area systematically in the late 19th century.

Cyriacus had hoped to visit Egypt and Ethiopia, but he never got there. However, in his life he did record for posterity countless ancient monuments around the Mediterranean, paving the way for future archaeologists and cultural tourists.

判断题（Questions 1–7）

题号	答案	题干翻译	详细定位（第 X 段 + 定位句）	定位句翻译	详细解释（非常详细）
1	TRUE	Cyriacus 在出发前无法对他的旅程做功课/研究。	第 2 段：“We prepare for such trips by reading about what we are going to see… Cyriacus of Ancona … lacked these advantages …”	我们通常会通过阅读了解将要看的东西来做准备……而 Cyriacus 缺少这些优势……	同义改写链：题干 research his journeys before he left ≈ 原文 prepare… by reading… set out… have a sense of what we will encounter（出发前做攻略/预先了解）。原文明确说他 lacked these advantages（缺乏这些准备条件），等于在说他 没法像现代人一样出发前研究/准备。因此题干与原文一致 → TRUE。
2	NOT GIVEN	罗马皇帝图拉真建造了安科纳（这座城市）。	第 3 段：“…the marble arch, erected in AD 115, to the Roman Emperor Trajan.”	……那座大理石拱门建于公元 115 年，是献给罗马皇帝图拉真的。	原文只提到 “拱门 erected… to Trajan（为纪念/献给图拉真而建）”，并没有说 “Trajan built the city of Ancona（图拉真建了安科纳城）”。注意：to the Roman Emperor Trajan 只是 “献给/为了纪念图拉真”，不是 “由他建造城市”。因此信息缺失 → NOT GIVEN。
3	FALSE	在 15 世纪，尊重古代建筑是很普遍的。	第 3 段：“Not many people … were interested…; they generally ignored old buildings… or worse, dismantled them for their building materials.”	在 Cyriacus 所处时代，对历史旅行感兴趣的人并不多；人们通常无视旧建筑或结构，甚至更糟，把它们拆掉当建筑材料。	题干说 “尊重很普遍（widespread respect）”，原文却说：not many people were interested（感兴趣的不多）+ ignored（无视）+ dismantled（拆掉当材料）。这不仅 “不普遍”，还带明显负面行为（拆毁）。与题干直接相反 → FALSE。
4	FALSE	作为商人的经历给了他研究古代世界所需的技能。	第 4 段：“His training as a merchant did not prepare him for this vocation…”	他作为商人的训练并没有让他为这种 “使命/职业”（研究古代）做好准备……	题干说 “商人经历给了他所需技能”，原文明确否定：did not prepare him（并未使他具备/胜任）。属于正反对立 → FALSE。
5	TRUE	在启程旅行之前，Cyriacus 学习了古代语言。	第 4 段：“…first by learning Latin… then adding ancient Greek. Having done this, he then set off on voyages…”	……先学拉丁语，随后再学古希腊语。完成这些之后，他才开始在地中海展开航行……	关键结构：Having done this, he then set off…（做完这些之后才出发）。说明他在真正开始 “voyages（航行/旅程）” 前，已经学了 Latin + ancient Greek（都属于 ancient languages）。题干 “before leaving” 与原文时间顺序一致 → TRUE。
6	FALSE	15 世纪走海路比走陆路更容易。	第 5 段：“Overland… were bad; voyages by sea were even worse.”	陆路旅行很糟；而海上航行更糟糕。	题干：sea easier than land（海路更容易）。原文：land bad，但 sea even worse（海路更糟）。完全相反 → FALSE。
7	NOT GIVEN	Cyriacus 试图让同船的旅客更舒服。	第 5 段：“Remarkably, Cyriacus never complained about the miseries of travel.”	值得注意的是，Cyriacus 从不抱怨旅行的苦难。	原文只说他 不抱怨、很乐观、能忍受困难，并没有任何信息表明他 采取行动改善同伴的舒适度（如 “make others comfortable / provide amenities” 等）。缺乏对应信息 → NOT GIVEN。

笔记填空（Questions 8–13）— ONE WORD ONLY

A) The city of Cyzicus（Cyzicus 城）

题号	答案（1 词）	题干翻译	详细定位（第 X 段 + 定位句）	定位句翻译	详细解释（非常详细）
8	commerce	这座城市的财富来自于 _____。	第 6 段：“…Cyzicus… had relied on commerce for its financial success.”	……Cyzicus 这座古罗马城市的经济成功依赖于商业 / 贸易。	题干：wealth came from…（财富来源）。原文直接给出：financial success relied on commerce。同义：wealth/financial success 对应，来源=依赖对象 → 填 commerce。
9	guidebook	当 Cyriacus 参观时，关于这些古城遗址的 _____ 是没有的。	第 6 段：“…because there was no guidebook on ancient architecture to help him.”	……因为当时没有关于古代建筑的旅游指南 / 手册来帮助他。	题干结构：“___ to the ancient city ruins was not available”（关于遗址的某种“指引 / 指南”不存在）。原文明确：no guidebook。注意“ONE WORD ONLY”，不能写 no guide book 或 guide book（分开会算两词），标准写法 guidebook。
10	earthquake	这座城市在公元 123 年被一次强烈的 _____ 摧毁。	第 7 段：“…in AD 123 the city was so devastated by a major earthquake …”	……公元 123 年，这座城市被一次大地震严重摧毁……	题干 powerful + in AD 123，与原文 major earthquake 完全对应。powerful≈major（同义替换）。
11	campaign	一年后，哈德良皇帝支持了一项 _____ 来重建城市。	第 7 段：“…he decided to subsidise a campaign to reconstruct Cyzicus.”	……他决定资助一项重建行动 / 工程来重建 Cyzicus。	题干 supported a ___ to rebuild；原文：subsidise a campaign to reconstruct。rebuild≈reconstruct（同义）。所以填 campaign。
12	doorway	他画下了神庙的 _____ 以及其装饰雕刻。	第 7 段：“He sketched the great doorway adorned with carved foliage …”	他画下了那座宏伟的门道 / 门口，上面装饰着雕刻的叶饰和神话人物。	题干“the ___ to the temple”对应原文“the great doorway”。且题干后半句“decorative carvings”与原文“adorned with carved foliage…”对应。
